

Picture courtesy of J.D. Sculpture

Yang'asha of Guizhou

Kaili, China

The large-scale landscape sculpture "Yang Asha" is located in Kaili, Guizhou Province, China. The sculpture was started in November 2016 and completed in April 2017. It is the highest statue of the Hmong goddess in the country. The "Yang Asha" sculpture is 88 meters high. The base is 22 meters high and the statue is 66 meters tall. It was taken from the local Miao holiday "February 2" and "June 6" and has the traditional meaning of the Miao nationality. The main character sculpture and base spray adopt SUS304 stainless steel plate, and the internal main structure is welded by special special-shaped steel. The surface is a brushed stainless steel plate with uniform texture. On December 16, 2017, Mr. Andreas, the world record certification official, read out the certification results and issued the world record certificate of "The world's largest Hmong goddess Yang Asha sculpture".

Environment:	park side
Use:	main body
Material:	SUS304 brushed
Architects:	Yutong Zhang, Jun Lv
Photographers:	J.D. Sculpture
More information:	chinajdsulpture.com

Picture courtesy of J.D. Sculpture

Picture courtesy of J.D. Sculpture

